The Census Bureau developed six mindsets and eight tract segmentations that may be helpful when crafting your communications.

Messages about personal agency and the role of census in providing funding for community services, like roads, safety services, hospitals, and schools are most effective.